SUMMARY

I'm a React.js developer specializing in building fast, scalable, and user-friendly web applications. My primary stack is React and Next.js, with strong experience in TypeScript. I focus on clean architecture, maintainable code, and delivering real value through every project.

I've worked with multiple clients, helping turn ideas into production-ready products — from landing pages to more complex web applications using modern technologies and best practices.

Alongside frontend, I also have experience with Node.js and Express. While my main strength is frontend development, I continue improving my backend skills to better understand full-stack architecture and build more complete solutions.
